

COUNCIL DISCUSSES FIRE PROTECTION SERVICE TO DISTRICTS BEYOND LIMITS

A definite policy in regard to sending Redwood City fire apparatus beyond the city limits in response to calls from outside territory is wanted by City Manager E. A. Rolison. He asks the city council to help determine that policy, in a communication which he submitted, and which follows:

Gentlemen: On Saturday, October 31, at 6:45 p. m., our Seagrave pumper responded to a telephone call from outside territory, was made areas outside the corporate limits of the city is of such vital concern that it occurs to me some definite policy in this regard is an appropriate subject for consideration. I am sure that this communication is to call your attention to our past experience and, if possible, determine more definitely as to what limits the fire department shall respond in the future when called upon to render aid in the protection of outside territory.

to put this equipment into service at a point on the southerly side of Emerald Lake No. 1 where a suction pipe is installed for fire protection purposes, the location of the conflagration being the Glascock residence on Vista drive, slightly in excess of one mile beyond the westerly limits of the city.

The cause has not as yet definitely determined, the above equipment after operating for a very brief period of time went out of commission and was taken to the city's machine shop in a disabled condition.

While I do not wish to deny that friendly spirit of co-operation which is expected and has in the past been enjoyed by surrounding communities, I do feel that owners of property located within the city proper might justly complain in the event a policy of risking equipment in the interest of the protection of territory outside the corporate limits of the city is continued without serious consideration being given as to limitations and especially so in the event of a major conflagration taking place at a time when proper equipment is not available.

Upon investigation, it was found for this reason.

Consequence by the number of repairs in service. However, in addition to this, one of the main pump bearings was found to be frozen due to lack of lubrication. This pump is of the centrifugal type and so designed that the pump bearings are lubricated by water passing through the pump while in operation, therefore, should it fail to function the lubrication would cease and trouble similar to that experienced might be expected. This, it is predicted by the mechanics, no doubt, was the use of our recent trouble, therefore, a further investigation was made of the suction pipe to which the pump was connected in order, if possible, to locate the trouble. Upon investigation, the connection on this pipe was found to be not provided with a proper flange, and the general installation somewhat unsatisfactory for the purpose for which it was intended. The condition of this suction pipe, it is believed, was indirectly the cause of a major portion of the trouble due to the fact that the absence of a proper flange would have a tendency to permit air to enter the suction and the condition of the screen provided no doubt added to the difficulty.

Councilman George McNulty was strongly opposed to rendering service in unincorporated territory. "It isn't fair to the taxpayers of Redwood City," he said.

Councilman Charles G. Lambert was of a similar opinion. "Why," he asked, "should the people outside come into the city when they can enjoy the benefits of our service without paying for it?"

Councilmen Charles Hildebrand and William J. Dusel expressed their opinions.

Briefly, the results have been that major pieces of our fire fighting equipment are worn out and must be replaced for a period of approximately 12 years in an attempt to protect outside territory and the cost of repairing the same has been approximately $425.

While in this particular instance the result has not been serious, rather than the cost of repairs, the possibility of a major conflagration with equipment out of service with the expenditure of $425, to reach a head.

The city manager said that "our equipment is not designed for the type of service Emerald Lake needs."

On motion of McCarthy, the communication was filed, without any decision being reached, other than that the city will probably give what service it can, in an emergency, until next March. By that time, it is thought, consolidation proceedings may have reached a head.

Unbearable Pain Is Cause Of Action; Death Near

Believed to have been born prematurely, the body of a child was found at the old Thornton station of the Ocean Shore railroad on the Pedro mountain road, San Mateo county, Thursday. It had lain in the open about two days, it is thought.

Maddened by pain, Christian Hashagen, 80, of Baytree road, San Carlos, shortly after 8:30 Thursday morning shot himself through the mouth with a large .44-caliber, Smith & Wesson type revolver, and was near death at the Beresford Community Hospital this afternoon.

The octogenarian called at the home of a neighbor, Miss Violet Jacobs, who resides across the street, and asked her to summon her son, Joseph M. Hashagen, 5180 Mission street, San Francisco, and

The body was almost fully developed, according to word sent Coroner J. C. McGovern by Deputy Coroner Lucio Pepper of Daly City, where Constable S. A. Landini of Colma.

It was wrapped in a current issue of a humorous magazine which bore the address of a San Francisco resident, which was being checked by the homicide squad there this afternoon.

After the police found that the embryo was removed by an illegal operation was also being investigated by Constable Landini.

She was to tell them that their father was very ill and unable to stand the pain longer. They rushed to San Carlos, arriving an hour later to find their father unconscious in the garage at his home. Half an hour before, Harry Jacobs' brother of Violet, had said he would call.

An ambulance summoned from Wood County rushed Hashagen to the Beresford Community Hospital, where he was attended by H. A. Clattenburg. The bullet passed through the right temple, but Hashagen regained consciousness. He told the doctor that the police women had taken him to seek relief from the pain.

Atherton Woman Wills $200,000; Some To Charity

An estate of $200,000 was left by Mrs. Minnie Corbett MacMonagle, 68, of Atherton, who died in Monterey, Switzerland, on September 18. It was disclosed by her will on file with County Clerk Elmore B. Hinman in Redwood City.

Her sisters, Mrs. Laura Best, 3508 Clay street, San Francisco, and Mrs. Nellie Moody, mother-in-law of Helen Wills, will share most of the estate. Upon their death, $5,000 is to be paid to Frederick G. Moody Jr., husband of the tennis star; Corbett and Joseph Moody, nephews, and Mary Best, niece.

The Grace Episcopal Church, San Francisco, will gain a like amount, and the balance of the estate is to be divided between the Stanford Convalescent Home, Palo Alto, and the Children's Hospital, San Francisco.

Mrs. Beverly Trites of New Brunswick, a friend, who was left $5,000, was cut off in a codicil after her death. Mrs. David Thornton, another friend, is willed $500. Mrs. Clarence Couder, a maid, is willed $5,000, and Raymond Vivien, chauffeur, $1,000.

The San Francisco Bank is executor of the will.

Report of Savage Estate is Filed

H. C. Tuchen, inheritance tax appraiser of the estate of W. J. Savage, deceased, has filed his report in the county clerk's office. The appraisal shows the estate to be valued at $130,803.79. From this is deducted the expense of administration and debts, amounting to $40,399.86, leaving a clear market value of the estate of $89,403.93. The executor of the estate received fees in the sum of $2,138.04. Attorney Clay, of Daly City, was both the executor and attorney for the estate.

The estate is to be distributed to James Savage, a brother, who receives $28,814.73, and the inheritance tax to be paid by him amounts to $828.38. Robert Savage, another brother, and Mrs. Mary A. Westkamper, a sister, are to receive similar sums, and to pay an inheritance tax in the same amount.

$7195 Sought For Boy Hurt By Auto

Damages of $7195 for injuries incurred by Albert Gay, a 14-year-old lad, have been asked by Mrs. E. Gay in a lawsuit filed with County Clerk Elmore B. Hinman against George Rissler and "John Doe." The boy suffered injuries which crippled and scarred his hands in an automobile accident in Rummymede, October 11.

MENLO PARK P.-T.A. OUT FOR MEMBERS

In an effort to increase its membership, the Menlo Park Parent-Teacher Association is conducting a drive which will end December 1. All parents, teachers and friends of children attending the Menlo Park schools are invited to join.

Among the activities carried on by the association is the serving of lunches at the school at the cost of 5 cents a day for one hot dish. Chocolate is served on Mondays, stew on Tuesdays, soup on Wednesdays, mashed potatoes with carrots and peas on Thursdays, and beans on Fridays. All of the food is fresh and is prepared in the school kitchen. Parents are asked to give their children enough lunch to complete the meal.

The home section of the association is making a layette for a needy mother and carrying on a reading program. Eighteen mothers attended the last regular meeting of the P.-T.A. last Friday. Pupils in Miss Bertha Kuck's room gave a dramatization of "Hiawatha" and Miss Ruth Braccesi's class presented shadow pictures. A recitation, "Indian Lullaby," was given by Miriam Beach. A talk on books was given by Miss Clara Dills. San Mateo county librarian. Children's books were on display.

Mrs. F. C. Beach represented the unit at the president's meeting held in San Mateo Monday. Members of the Menlo Park association are invited to attend the annual Fathers' Night program of the 17th District Federation of P.-T.A. in Burlingame High School tonight.

THREE NEW PRECINCTS FOR REDWOOD—TWO FOR MENLO—WOODSIDE ONE

According to the new alignment of county election precincts, Redwood City gains three new precincts to be known as 22, 23 and 24 and two outside the city limits to be known as 6 and 7. Menlo Park gains one inside and one outside, while Woodside gets one extra precinct, making a total of two for that locality. By this new adjustment the county will have 200 precincts. The county has a population of 85,000 and is in the fifteenth class. It is the next fastest growing county in the state, Los Angeles occupying first place.

GETS TREE NURSERY
CASS LAKE, Minn. (AP)—One of the largest federal tree nurseries is to be located here. It will furnish seedlings to forest areas in Minnesota, Michigan and Wisconsin, and will have a capacity for 15,000,000 trees.

Menlo Park

Tomorrow all roads will lead to Stanford because the big game between Berkeley and the Stanford eleven will take place in the stadium of the local institution where thousands of football fans will witness the big contest of the season. Even money is waged that Stanford will win. Both teams are in good condition and a battle will take place that is certain to please the fans. Local men and women will have prominent places on the grandstand.

The Kirkpatrick building close to the Southern Pacific station has been leased by Tommy White, the taxi man, and is to be converted into a garage to accommodate his taxi business. This is a very fine location as passengers alighting from the trains may find ready service.

The Menlo Park Community Club which operates the Blue Moon dance hall is preparing to give a series of benefit dances for the needy families of this locality. The club is to be commended for its efforts.

A movement is on foot to open lower Oak Grove avenue through the Flood property to connect with the Bay Shore highway, now being completed to Willow Road. A petition is being circulated for signatures, asking the city council to take some action towards making the connection. This is the logical route to the new thoroughfare. Only a short extension of Oak Grove avenue would do the trick.

According to the new adjustment of election precincts in the county, Menlo Park has gained two new precincts, one inside the city limits and one outside, to be known as 5 and 6. The population of the community has grown so much in the past two years that the voting precincts were necessary.

A post of the American Legion is to be established in Menlo Park. The charter list is to be opened soon for membership and will be in charge of Philip Blanchard. The new organization is to be known as the Joseph Murray Post, out of respect for Joseph Murray, who died at Monterey shortly after enlisting. He was the only soldier enlisting from Menlo Park, who died during the world war. It is fitting that the post should be named after him. His young life was given to his country and to the flag he loved so well.

The unemployment committee met at the city hall, Friday night, when it was announced that the City of Palo Alto was taking care of the itinerants, in feeding and housing them at quarters within the city limits. The camp at the San Francisco Creek has been broken up. It was reported that a camp was to be established at Atherton, where fifty men will be taken care of at the city's expense. It was also agreed that after next Friday night the committee would meet every two weeks.

On November 15 a son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Mangold of Menlo Park. The mother is at the Palo Alto hospital and is doing very nicely.

The Mothers' club will give a turkey whist party in the Hall of the Nativity on Monday evening next. Turkeys are to be given as prizes. A large crowd will attend the party. Fans will struggle to secure one of the fine fat turkeys. The admission is 50 cents.

The duck season opened auspiciously last Monday. Since then good bags have been brought to town. Edward O'Keefe and Joseph Prince will leave tomorrow for the rice fields at Willows, to be gone three days. In that region there are a great many birds as the rice is an inducement for the hungry north-erners. There are a few ducks on the local marshes but these are very hard to get, as they fly high. During the day they rest on the waters of the bay coming to the marshes during the night.

The rainfall for the last storm was 1.34 inches, making a total of 1.47 for the season, as against 1.65 at this time last year. Early last November there was a heavy storm, but there was very little rain during the remainder of the month.

M. A. Denton, proprietor of the Peralta Pigeon Farm, left his hotel in San Francisco on November 14, and has not been heard from since. Before leaving the hotel, Denton telephoned his daughter, Dorothy, that he was ill. The family cannot account for his disappearance. His business was in an excellent condition, but some allege that his interest was in the poultry business. The unemployment committee last evening, decided to hold meetings every Monday evening hereafter, instead of Friday evenings. An important meeting is to be held next Monday night. On November 25th the local theatre is to give the proceeds of the afternoon and evening to the unemployment fund.

Nances were not so good and this may have caused him worry and mental anguish. Mr. Denton was held in high esteem, regarded a good business man and was popular with his many customers. Denton was about 45 years of age and possessed a pleasing personality and an affability that made him many friends. It is hoped that he will soon return to his family and friends.

E. L. Taylor who passed away in Palo Alto last week, was widely known in Menlo Park twenty-five years ago when he conducted a horseshoeing shop in the O'Keefe block. Taylor was raised in Livermore, where he learned the horseshoeing trade. His skill was recognized by the late Senator Stanford, in the late 80s, when Taylor moved to the Palo Alto Stock Farm, to engage in shoeing the fleet-footed racers that were bred there. Taylor had the distinction of shoeing the animals that won honors on the track and brought fame to the noted stock farm.

After retiring from the farm Taylor started a blacksmith shop here, taking a partner, the late Joseph Greer. Both men built up a big business, having for their customers such men as Senator Felton, J. C. Flood, the Selbys and the Athertons. Some years ago Taylor moved to Palo Alto to live in retirement. His son, Charles, is an engineer of ability, being an assistant to M. M. O'Shaughnessy, city engineer of San Francisco.

Mrs. Feline Bittke was granted an interlocutory decree of divorce by Judge Buck yesterday from her husband, Fred Bittke, on the grounds of desertion. Bittke is the well known crooner for KFRC of San Francisco.

By the terms of the will of Minnie C. MacMonagle filed in the superior court this week at Redwood City, a legacy was bequeathed to the Stanford Convalescent Home. The estate of the MacMonagles at Atherton is to be sold. The estate is valued at $200,000.

Bernard Meyer, who died this week in Mayfield, was well known on the peninsula. He came to Mayfield in 1859 when two years old. For fifty years he was a notary public and for over forty years had been a druggist in the town in which he was raised. His family came across the Isthmus with the parents of Dan Mullen, the retired harness maker of this city. Both families settled in Mayfield when there were only three houses there.

The town was laid out by Mr. Paul and called Mayfield because of the wealth of poppies growing in the broad fields.

Mullen learned his trade in Mayfield and in 1876 came to Redwood City where he has since resided.

Meyer was a city judge up until a short time ago. He was 76 years old. The Meyer ranch of several hundred acres in the Alpine district adjoins the vast holdings of Governor James Rolph.

Alice E. Lynch Files Suit Against Free

Alice E. Lynch yesterday filed a suit in the superior court, against the estate of H. R. Free, deceased, to secure half of the estate, alleging that she entered a partnership with the deceased, on July 1915, to conduct a real estate business and was to receive half of the net profits. In her complaint she alleges that the estate is valued at $291,500, consisting of valuable real estate holdings in Redwood City in other places. The indebtedness amounts to $23,000. The fair plaintiff asks the court to halt a sale of the personal property, valued at $4000.

A sister is the principal heir, and the Bank of America is the administrator of the estate. The plaintiff, for many years, was the housekeeper and manager of the Free household at his home on Selby Lane. There he raised chrysanthemums for the San Francisco market and there also sold real estate, at times consummating large sales.

It is thought that when the case comes to trial much sensational testimony will be given by the plaintiff.

I. M. Peckham, assistant U. S. attorney, is the lawyer for the plaintiff. He is considered one of the ablest jurists in San Francisco.

INDUSTRY IN AGRICULTURE IS STABILIZER

The 6,500,000 Farm Units Must Be Or- ganized Like An Army

MERCED, Nov. 17.—In spite of the fact that American agriculture is handicapped in any movement requiring concerted action by its 6,500,000 farm units, just as an army would be handicapped by that many generals, the solution of present-day farming troubles must and will come through the industrialization of agriculture on a sound business basis.

This opinion was expressed tonight by President Robert Gordon Sproul of the University of California speaking before the Thirtieth Annual Convention of the California Farm Bureau Federation which opened here Monday and closes tomorrow.

No Longer a Spendthrift Nation

In part President Sproul said: "Perhaps the most significant change in American life has been our recent transition from a notoriously spendthrift nation to one in which increasing emphasis is laid upon the elimination of waste and the conservation of natural resources, capital, goods and labor. Industrialists have learned that the successful and profitable development of their enterprises depends upon the continued application of sound business principles and the ability to meet changing times with changed methods. The pressure of competition has compelled a constant effort to meet consumer tastes and demands, the adjustment of production methods to lower prices, the development of individual types of products, and the search for industry-wide cooperation in stabilizing production. Attention has been directed to market analysis. New machinery of distribution has been brought to use. To all these challenging changes American agriculture has responded but her response has lagged far behind the response of industry.

"American agriculture represents 6,500,000 individual farm units, approximately 37 per cent of our total population, a capitalization of some $500,000,000 and a gross annual income of more than $12,000,000,000. But this imposing edifice, slowly erected over a long course of years, rests upon foundations of outgrown methods and old habits which served well enough for an earlier day and order of life, but are not likely to be adequate to meet the heavy loads of the new and forward-moving order. The farm structure is sagging in one direction and another; in many places it is badly cracked, so that its occupants are disposed at times to demand an entirely new building, convinced that the old is no longer safe.

"Agricultural Revolutions Are Slow. Of course, it is more difficult to revolutionize agriculture than it is to make changes in industry. The industrial army is composed of a handful of generals and millions of privates. The agricultural army is a la Mexican, is made up of a handful of enlisted men and millions of generals. Each one of these agricultural generals has to be approached individually and made familiar with the findings of science and their practical application to the business of farming. Industrial revolutions may be accomplished with comparative dispatch, but agricultural revolutions come only after long delays, the exercise of infinite patience, and costly expense. Henry Ford produced 15,000,000 cars of model T. All his factories were geared for the production of that particular model. But the buying public suddenly refused to purchase model T; it wanted a different model. In two years Mr. Ford revolutionized his entire production, and placed his new car on the market and in distribution. But Mr. Ford is not an agricultural general, competing with 6,500,000 other farm generals. If he were, the revolution would take longer, but it would happen just the same.

"So it must be with agriculture. If the signs of the times point correctly, we are looking forward to an era of agriculture organized as an industry. In that I see nothing to fear; much to gain. The industrialization of agriculture is nothing more or less than a perfection of the tools with which the man on the farm works, and is as inevitable as the progress of which it is part. To the extent that the lower functions of labor can be shifted onto machinery, or made automatic through the application of electricity, agriculture will become a field for the exercise of intelligence rather than of brute strength. Such has been the history of industry, such must be the experience of agriculture, for reas-

PETITION FOR LETTERS OF ADMINISTRATION

Dr. Walter B. Coffey, chief surgeon for the Southern Pacific Company, late yesterday petitioned the superior court for letters of administration upon the estate of his brother, Alfred I. Coffey who died on November 10.

The value of the estate is unknown except that it exceeds the sum of $10,000. It is thought however, that it will reach the $50,000 mark.

The heirs at law are Gladys A. Coffey widow, and Gwendolyn V. Coffey, daughter over the age of 21. C. W. Durbrow widely known railroad attorney, is the lawyer for the petitioner.

ons that are obvious.

"That agriculture, consciously or unconsciously, is finding its way to this conclusion is indicated by four modern trends, two direct and two indirect. There is a steady movement toward the growth of large-scale farms. Processes for the commercial utilization of farm waste and manufacture of by-products are being developed. There is a tendency to decentralize industry by locating manufacturing units in agricultural districts, thus making it possible to supplement farm incomes by seasonal employment of farm labor in rural factories. The distance between production and consumption of farm products is gradually being shortened by more thorough standardization and more scientific distribution. There is also the improvement of the status of the farmer through effective systems of production which enable high-cost farmers to reduce expenses. In this connection, it seems appropriate to mention the very specific work which our agricultural extension service and our Giannini Foundation of Agricultural Economics are doing, through surveys, cost studies, production surveys, and cooperative projects to assist the producer to determine his farm leaks and reduce his costs. These things are industrialization, or if you prefer, efficient management, and increase income while they decrease expense."

PROVEN HONESTY

MONTICELLO, Wis. — No one can now doubt the honesty of a debtor of Mrs. Martha J. Richards. Mrs. Richards was ironing recently when the woman, a former resident of this city and now living in Rockfield, Ill., called and gave her $5 of a $6 debt she had contracted 40 years ago with Mrs. Richards' husband, a store owner. She promised to pay the remaining dollar as soon as she could.

"In the Next Room," a three-act mystery play by Eleanor Robson and Harriet Ford, will be given this evening at 8 o'clock in the auditorium of Sequoia high school, by a cast composed of members of Redwood Chapter, Order of De Molay, assisted by several from the Redwood City Chapter, Order of Rainbow for Girls, the Eastern Star, and Masons. Claude van Pattee is directing the production.

The play is based on the story of a boulevards cabinet, a cabinet of French antiquity, composed of secret drawers in which are the rare poisons and deadly devices designed by a clever criminal. It has been purchased by Mr. Vantine, a collector of antiques. A strange Frenchman, calling on him, dies mysteriously. There is the sudden appearance and the disappearance of an unknown woman. The actions of the butler become suspicious. Madame de Charriere claims the cabinet and is thwarted by Felix Armand, representative of a French antique firm. With the arrival of the police, Inspector Grady and Colonel Piggott solve the mystery "In the Next Room." The cast is as follows:

White Cross State Organizer Talks To Kiwanians

Although the appetite for drugs may be acquired in five weeks, once acquired, it is never wholly curable, Earle A. Rowell, state organizer for California White Cross, anti-narcotic organization, told members of the Kiwanis Club Wednesday at their noon meeting at Sequoia Hotel.

To substantiate his statement, Mr. Rowell recited a number of instances that had come under his personal observation. An addict to any of the pernicious drugs such as morphine, cocaine or heroin, will resort to any measure to secure them, and the petty thief, or the footpad, is often a victim of some drug.

Contrary to common belief, the use of drugs is not a habit, the speaker pointed out, but rather a disease requiring the most careful medical attention and nursing care.

Acting as chairman of the meeting yesterday was Dr. F. S. Gregory, who is a member of the recently organized White Cross Society in Redwood City.

Class In Americanization To Be Tuesday

Friendly Indian Tribe Growing

The popularity of the Sioux Friendly Indian tribe under the program of the Young Men's Christian Association is shown by the fact that the enrollment has now reached 44 boys 9 to 12 years of age.

Under the leadership of Billy Dusel this group has shown a very steady growth. At each meeting the boys are bringing in new Indiancraft projects which they have completed. The boys are rapidly getting their opening ceremony into shape so that they will be able to present it before a group of their mothers in the near future. This Y.M.C.A. club is open to all boys of this age.

In addition to these activities, the Junior Red Cross group has provided speakers for club meetings in Redwood City to stimulate interest in the roll call. Arthur Swanson is temporary chairman and Kenneth Bennett is secretary.

The members of the Belmont American Legion Auxiliary Unit No. 377 took part in the legion aerial drive held on Sunday at Mills Fields. The auxiliary, through its membership chairman, Mrs. Claude Sorensen, turned in eight new members, which makes an enrollment of 24 members. Mrs. Sorensen and Mrs. A. Murray Spooner, president of the local unit, motored to Mills Field Sunday, where they turned over to Miss Ethel Flynn, state representative for the auxiliary units, the names and moneys of the eight new candidates. The auxiliary is working for a national citation.

In the San Francisco Society of Women Artists' exhibition this month is a Belmont woman, Mrs. Ruby Adair Prior of Belle Mont. Mrs. Prior has an oil painting of Frank Wellington, Pescadero's 82-year-old woodsman and pioneer. The exhibition is being held at the California Palace of the Legion of Honor in San Francisco and will continue until December 3. Mrs. Prior is the wife of Charles Prior, editor and publisher of the Belmont Courier, and is a member of a pioneer family of the peninsula. The many who know Frank Wellington will be interested in his recent celebration of 50 years of Odd Fellowship. He was recently presented with an emblem by the Half Moon Bay Odd Fellows lodge.

The Butano Forest

The board of supervisors at a recent meeting started the machinery in motion to acquire the Butano Forest, consisting of 10,000 acres of virgin redwood timber. It is the only stand of redwood trees of any magnitude left in the county and should be purchased for posterity, for the enjoyment of untold thousands yet to come. Mills are already in the vast forest. These giant Sequoias will be cut down and made into lumber unless a move is made to acquire the tract now for sale. It would be a pity to commercialize these trees that are, and have been for ages, the admiration of the people of the world.

We commend the supervisors in their prompt assistance in this important matter. By their action they have demonstrated that they are fully alive to the wants of the future. They have splendid vision, sensing the fact that this very last of the privately owned forests of the Santa Cruz mountains is soon to go the way all the rest have gone during the past 70 years.

The San Mateo county supervisors have started a movement to rescue this great and splendid growth of redwoods from sure destruction by the woodman's ax. They have intervened to preserve this magnificent forest.

The Native Sons' parlors of the state are sponsoring the project. They started the movement some years ago to have this big tract bought for a public park and recreation grounds for the people of the state. Unceasingly they have worked and it looks now as if their efforts are to bring forth fruit.

Should the tract be acquired, not only will the bay region have the most wonderful and unique forest park anywhere on the face of God's green earth, but the entire state is included in this great movement.

Olympic Games Grafters

Warnings are being sent out over California to newspapers, and through them to the business and professional people of the state, telling them to be on the lookout for grafters who will be calling on them soon with several kinds of advertising "propositions" for the Olympic Games, to be held in Los Angeles next year. These "grafts," as before stated, are of several kinds—programs, stickers, stationery, newspaper tie-ups, etc.

The fact is that no advertising program of any sort has as yet been authorized by anybody who has anything to do with the Olympic Games, and any "proposition" that may be presented is of private and predatory nature, pure and simple. If, and when, any legitimate advertising plan is authorized by the authorities of the Olympic Games, due and thoroughly accredited notice will be given through the newspapers of the state.

"The Oldest Inhabitant"

There is a certain distinction that attaches to the term "Oldest Inhabitant," that is, or ought to be, a title of respect. Generally it is. When a man or a woman has lived in one locality for the length of a long lifetime, the chances are all in favor of the assumption that the man or woman has lived a clean and upright life as well. People who are not of the best type of citizenship do not, as a rule, stay a great many years in one locality.

These thoughts are suggested by the death last week of Judge Bernard Mayer, of Mayfield. He had lived in that village, now a part of the city of Palo Alto, for 70 years—ever since he was four years old. He lived an upright and honorable life. His friends and neighbors honored him with offices of trust, and he never betrayed their confidence in him. He died, as he had lived, respected and honored by all of his fellow townsmen. What a splendid record that is. Did he have wealth? Had he piled up a great fortune to leave behind him? We don't know. We don't care. It isn't worth inquiring about. But we do know that he left a stainless name, and that is a priceless heritage for his heirs. They must prize it above all worldly wealth. "When the 'Oldest Inhabitant' is also one of the best-liked and most highly-respected inhabitants of a locality, then that locality has, indeed, something to be proud of.

UP AND DOWN THE STATE

SNIPING HOOVER

Leaders of the national Democratic party have as a whole been fairly innocent of "Hoover sniping."

Whatever indecent attack there has been on the president, not as a party man but as the chief administrator of the nation, has come from so called independents, seeking to inflame minority objectives on a majority of the party, such as the consistent attacks of men like Johnson of California and Borah of Idaho.

The sort of impulse that caused Senator Borah to undertake to interfere between the president of the United States and the visiting prime minister of France would not be tolerated in any social or business organization. It is tolerated in politics only because we expect our nation to stand for more bad management than we would think of enduring in any other sort of relationship.

One reason for Democratic reasonableness regarding the president is, of course, that they are so bitterly divided among themselves that they have no time for interfering with the president, even if he happens to be a Republican. But leading Democrats like Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi and Representative Garner of Texas have taken care to distinguish between Hoover as party chief and Hoover as president, a distinction the Borahs and Johnsons are unable to see. — Fresno Republican.

HOW ABOUT CROONERS?

Today the American Academy of Arts and Letters announces its annual award for the best radio dictation, with such academic magnificence as Nicholas Murray Butler and President Lowell of Harvard officiating.

That radio should have won recognition from this august society of learned men less than 10 years after it became a medium of expression is remarkable, especially when we consider that the movies are still out in the cold so far as the academy's recognition goes. Perhaps the theory is that all of us will eventually talk like radio announcers, and it is therefore a question of first importance how radio announcers talk.

Rewards are excellent, but how about a few penalties, too? We could almost approve of a revival of the Ku Klux Klan if it would institute an appropriate annual penalty for the worst radio crooner of the year.—San Francisco News.

"CHINATOWN QUEST IS REAL - LIFE THRILLER

Story Of Donaldina Cameron Of S. F. Told By Carol Green Wilson

ANNA BILLE, 1908, WRITES VERSES ON CHINA

By ELINOR V. COGSWELL
"CHINATOWN QUEST" by Carol Green Wilson, Stanford University Press, Humphrey Milford, London, Oxford University Press.

If detective stories and adventure yarns have lost their power to set your blood tingling while you read on, far into the night...

Try a thriller from the true story of San Francisco, "Chinatown Quest." This book by Carol Green Wilson, Stanford University Press, is just off the Stanford University Press. It tells the life-adventures of Donaldina Cameron, whose work of rescuing Chinese slave girls has led her along secret passageways, through skylights, and into evil opium dens in the Oriental quarters of several western cities.

Not the least charm of the account is its simplicity. The same quiet matter-of-factness which characterizes Miss Cameron's manner is reflected in the biography. The girl, burning attorneys in effigy, this gracious, white-haired Scotch woman who defies high-binders, breaks through barred doors, ignores high explosives left on her doorstep, and faces vengeance at every turn is doing anything unusual.

One of the most interesting accounts for Palo Alto people is that of the Battle of Palo Alto, when Stanford students and leaders of the community were holding mass meetings, marching on the streets, burning attorneys in effigy, chasing Orientals along the highway, and generally taking a lively interest in Miss Cameron's work. The story starts with Miss Cameron racing off, hatless and coatless, in the company of a Chinese girl, a rough constable, and a triumphant Chinese owner. It describes the night in the shack that then served Palo Alto as a jail, where she attempted to protect her charge by barricading the door with a piece of scantling. It tells how little Kum Quai was snatched from her there and carried off in a buggy and of how Miss Cameron was thrown from the buggy into the tarweed beside the road. Names of early residents of Palo Alto appear in the account of the uproar that followed, punctuated by mass meetings, and culminating in a coup at a court hearing in Mayfield by which Kum Quai was ultimately restored to 929 Sacramento street, the home for so many rescued slaves.

Mrs. Wilson has struck a nice balance between the tragedy of the lives from which these girls are drawn and the joyous romance of their transformation. Nor does she in her whole-hearted admiration for Miss Cameron, the "Lo Mo" of the rescue home, fail to bring into the picture all of the other individuals and influences which have contributed to the virtual cleaning up of the Chinatown by the Golden Gate. Many of the names will be familiar to local readers.

The writer declares that her greatest reward for the work of telling the story has been the year of intimate association with Miss Cameron and her "daughters." It was not easy, she says, to persuade the reticent "Lo Mo" to step into the limelight of a biography and she was not sure that consent would be given until one evening, in a friend's cottage at Los Gatos, Miss Cameron murmured, "If that book is written, I hope it will have a jade green cover with black letters."

It is this book in the jade green cover with black letters that the press has now issued—a beautiful book and as thrilling a book as has ever fallen into the hands of this reviewer.

And while we are turning our eyes toward China, we might note that an attractive volume of verse, called "Broken Tiles," has come to friends here from Anna Matilda Bille, Stanford '08, a teacher in Tsing Tsa University in Peking. Miss Bille has taught at Stanford within the last few years and is expected back on the campus next summer. "Broken Tiles" is privately printed.

It contains scarcely more than two dozen poems, most of them very short and Oriental in their etched imagery. Such as:

Again,
With prodigal disdain
Spreads her mantle on the plain
To fade.

This is entitled, "Spring in Hope." Other titles are "The Great Wall," "Camels," "The Old Summer Palace," "Shanghai Rain," "The Legend of the Great Bell," "Peking Blue," "Tsing Hua Autumn," and "Homesteadness."

All are characterized by keenness of perception and delicacy of image, with occasional flashes of that inevitably of school hockey signals poetry of the first rank.

ester and Rockwood.

Following these early morning hunts, the party would return to Mt. Vernon for dinner, usually finding additional guests who had arrived from neighboring estates to learn the result of the hunt and to enjoy the afternoon's gayety. A bounteous dinner was served, after which some of the guests would play loo, the preferred game of the times, others would gather about the harpsichord, and with the accompaniment of lute and violin, raise their voices in pleasing choruses.

After supper which was served about 9 or 10 o'clock, there was usually dancing the minuet, and jolly country dances which the young people especially enjoyed. As all rose early for the hunting, the hour of retirement was not late.

All sports were suspended during the war, and hunting was never revived at Mt. Vernon on its old-time scale. In 1785, Lafayette presented Washington with a pack of hounds, but increasing private and public duties caused him to give up such pleasure.

WOMEN UNION WORKERS WASHINGTON — Organized labor unions of the United States now number among their workers a total of 600,000 women, according to a report of the Women's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor. This is but a small portion of the total number of workers, however, there being about 11,000,000 in the country. U. S. Department Of Education Proposal Made By Committee Explained By Dean Cubberley

In recommending the creation of a federal department of education to be presided over by a secretary of education in the president's cabinet, the national advisory committee on education which made public its report Monday, merely proposed "that the federal government shall at last begin to do for the children and people of the nation something of what it has for so long done for fishes, mining, business and agriculture," and that "the same principle of conservation of the national resources for so long applied to timber, crops, cattle, hogs, fish and game, shall now be applied to child life as well."

This explanation was made today by Dr. Elwood P. Cubberley, dean of the Stanford School of Education, who was the only member on the national committee appointed from west of the Missouri river. During the 1929-30 college year, when he was visiting professor at Columbia University, Dr. Cubberley attended a number of meetings of the committee in Washington and helped in the set-up of the plan of work and the procedure to be followed.

Federal Aid Seen As Need The committee was made today by Dr. Elwood P. Cubberley, dean of the Stanford School of Education, who was the only member on the national committee appointed from west of the Missouri river.

The committee said was "led slowly but surely to see that while public education was and should remain a state affair, the federal government had certain clear responsibilities to the states that could be met only by general national aid, instead of by subsidies for such particular forms of education as could lobby their way through congress, and that extensive research and intellectual co-operation by the federal government was an essential need that should be met." Cubberley said that increased steadily, too, the committee came to see that federal office of education could never render the service that was needed or command the respect and attention that so important a national interest as education demanded, and that a secretary of education in the president's cabinet was the only sound solution.

Dr. Cubberley's full statement made today on the work and recommendations of the committee follows:

"This national committee was appointed by President Hoover and Secretary Wilbur in the summer of 1929, and a preliminary meeting of those near at hand was held soon afterward. The first meeting of the full committee was held on October 5, 1929, and was held in Washington early in October, 1929. The meeting covered three days, and revealed clearly that a committee, appointed as this one had been by selecting the leading representatives of many important educational interests, represented about as many different opinions as there were interested representatives. The agricultural representatives were interested in holding all that they had attained, the vocational men were tenacious of their position, business interests were afraid of increased taxation.

"By the close of the first day it was evident that such a body could get nowhere on the basis of general conference and personal opinions, and a small steering committee of seven, afterwards enlarged to about a dozen, was formed, consisting mostly of professors of education and college presidents, with a view to establishing some procedure whereby facts instead of opinions could be made the influencing factors. The committee, however, had no funds, and the members even having paid their own expenses to attend the meeting, and money was needed if a satisfactory job was to be done.

Committee Given Wide Scope

"Secretary Wilbur in opening the meeting had told the committee that the federal government had no policy, that we had been appointed to study the question and formulate one for the guidance of the president and congress, and that we were free to bring in our own report. The committee took laid before him, and through him the president, a plan for a careful study based on collected facts, put together by a staff of experts, and carefully formulated into a report which the committee would study later, approve or disapprove. Secretary Wilbur saw President Hoover, reported that the plan met with approval, but that no federal money was available but he told us to go ahead anyway and leave the matter of funds to him. The reply was characteristic, as was the outcome; within a few days Secretary Wilbur reported that the Rosenwald Fund of Chicago, a foundation that for years has rendered valuable aid to education in the South, had agreed to provide $100,000 to finance the study.

"From this point on the work was that of gathering a staff, collecting facts and slowly formulating a report. Dr. Henry Suzzallo, a Stanford man who had just been elected to the presidency of the Carnegie Foundation of New York, was borrowed for a year to head the staff. Dr. Charles R. Mann, secretary of the American Council of Education, was made secretary. Other able men were drawn from different universities for a year or two for the study. All federal legislation of an educational nature was studied, the work of the states and their needs were evaluated, the obligations of the federal government were examined, and the results of existing subsidies were inquired into.

line report was issued as a basis for study and criticism, and in July, 1931, the present final report was sent out in mimeographed form to the members of the committee for study and further criticism. In all, during the two years the committee has been at work, 135 different documents have been sent to members for their reactions. The final report thus represents quite unanimous opinion as was shown by the final adopting vote of 45 to 6.

"The final recommendations are what anyone who has followed the committee at the end of the first fall meeting of the committee, but with study of the facts the members were led slowly but surely to see that, while public education was and should remain a state affair, the federal government had certain clear responsibilities to the states that could be met only by general national aid, instead of by subsidies for such particular forms of education as could lobby their way through congress, and that extensive research and intellectual co-operation by the federal government was an essential need that should be met. Slowly but surely, too, the members of the committee came to see that a federal office of education could never render the service that was needed or command the respect and attention that so important a national interest as education demanded, and that a secretary of education in the president's cabinet was the only sound solution.

Place for U. S. Action Seen

"What the committee's report provides is a chart for further federal action. It proposes that the federal government shall at last begin to do for the children and people of the nation something of what it has for so long done for fishes, mining, business and agriculture. It proposes that the principle of conservation of the national resources, for so long applied to timber, crops, cattle, hogs, fish and game, shall now be applied to child life as well. While there is no way objecting to the federal government spending money for the elimination of hog and chicken cholera, cattle tick and bovine tuberculosis, increasing the yields of oats and butter fat, or aiding business and manufacturing to obtain larger profits, the committee holds that the time has come when some rather liberal amounts of federal money also should be spent on the study of educational problems, on co-operation with the states in the improvement of school systems, in the establishment of child welfare research stations, and for some aid to the states in their attempt to carry the educational obligations which the national government has shouldered off on them.

The report of the national committee was given newspaper release Monday. Professor Cubberley has placed his copy in the library of the Stanford School of Education where it may be consulted by those who are interested in securing more detailed information.

MORE AIR LICENSES

WASHINGTON — Licenses for planes and pilots during the third quarter of 1931 showed a considerable increase over the number in use during the second quarter, the United States Department of Commerce reports. There were 17,242 pilots, 10,669 aircraft and 9166 mechanic licenses in use during the third quarter, as against 16,268 pilots, 10,235 aircraft, and 8,716 mechanic licenses during the second quarter. The number of mechanic licenses dropped off during the third quarter.

POP'S COLUMN

Mr. Bud Simmers says: "Long's I kin feel that I've got my conscience with me, I reckon I'm in a safe majority, no matter what other folks may think."

Now that next year will be another one of those years in which we have to save the country by the exercise of our priceless privilege of the ballot, I want to make this suggestion: That all insurance policies written from now on (until after the elections next year) have incorporated in them a clause safeguarding the lives and property of the insured against overproduction, underemployment, communism, fire, flood, earthquakes, acts of God and the Democratic party. That's a good policy.

China has declared war on Japan. Now let's see if she can also make war on Japan.

A girl driving a car in heavy traffic on Sunday evening on the state highway, saw another car coming head on to crash her car. She promptly fainted, let go of the wheel, and the car swerved out of danger. Modern girls are certainly resourceful.

Carmel, the artist city by the sea, and so on, seeing a hard winter coming on, resorted to a new stunt in publicity. The city broadcast notice that a colony of nudists—male and female—was about to establish headquarters there. Now all roads leading to Carmel are bottle-necked with the rush of traffic into that town. Los Angeles thought of that stunt, too, they tell me, but found that Hollywood had already used it until it is no longer an attractive novelty.

And that reminds me of Sam Jones, another professional revivalist. I heard him in St. Louis one day preaching to men only. One thing he said was: "What I'll need here in St. Louis more than any other thing on God's earth, is a few men—real, shod-nuff men. Say: Some day when I haven't anything else to do, I'm coming here to y'all's miserable old, sin-infested city, and I'm going to walk along these streets so that the wimmin in yo city kin see me and bring their shod-nuff men. And we all—there were 12,000 of us in the old St. Louis music hall in Olive street—we all clapped our hands, and laughed and applauded, because, you see, we each one believed that Sam Jones was talking about men, and we each one knew, because I considered myself quite something of a fellow; but I felt that what he said about the other men was all right; they had it coming to them, I thought. As a matter of fact I have always felt that the generality of men folk are a mighty sorry lot, hoping these few lines may find you all the same.

Ben Deering was a professional revivalist who used to come through our part of the country holding revival meetings in a big tent. He seemed to dislike the habit some of our menfolk had of chewing tobacco while he was preaching. He said: "If you men must chew tobacco times, please don't chew in church. Put your chews down outside somewhere until after the service is over, and then you can take them up again. Don't be afraid; there isn't a hog, or a dog, or a buzzard or a polecat that will touch your chews of tobacco; it'll be right there for you when you go out again!"

Here's a Booklet Tells How To Make Useful Things to Sell

With the approach of winter, a strange contraption, just being introduced to this country, soon will be scotching across snow fields and icy lakes at 10 miles an hour. From the icy fields of the Scandinavian countries, the National Committee on Wood Utilization of the Department of Commerce has brought to America the so-called "Scandinavian Spark," consisting of a chair mounted on long steel runners, and propelled by the driver standing on one runner and pushing with the other foot.

This is just one of more than one hundred useful home and other articles completely illustrated in the new booklet, "You Can Make It For Profit," now being released from the Government Printing Office. Through representatives of the Department of Commerce, every country in the world was combed for ideas in the preparation of the book, according to Axel H. Oxholm, director of the wood utilization body.

The Committee points out that expensive tools and elaborate machinery are not required to make the objects described in the manual. On the other hand, a few simple tools found in almost every home will be sufficient to construct the articles. Most of these articles, according to the Committee, will find a ready market because they cater to the needs of individual homes and do not compete with commodities produced on a mass-production scale.

"You Can Make It For Profit," in the opinion of Mr. Oxholm, should be helpful to those temporarily unemployed. At practically all times there are some men out of work and those who find themselves in this situation, could, with the assistance of the Committee's booklet and a little initiative on their part, establish themselves in their various communities.

Speaking of home industries in relation to the farm, the booklet reads: "About one-third of the Nation's timberland is in the hands of farmers, and the development of home industries in the woodworking field, accordingly, would provide both an outlet for the products of farm woodlots and profitable occupation for the farmer during slack winter months."

Among the articles illustrated in "You Can Make It For Profit" are racks for canned goods and vegetables, clothes basket stands mounted on rollers; stairway shelves and utility racks; breakfast tables and benches; bathroom utility cabinets with laundry chute; built-in china closet and book case; fireplace bookcases; fireplace woodboxes; wood valances and wall paneling; storage chests; window seats and chests; garden furniture, and toys.

The new manual, the third of a series of "You Can Make It" bulletins, contains, in addition to plans, lists of materials, and instructions, suggestions for marketing the articles made for profit. It was written by H. Conrad Hoover, mechanical engineer of the Committee, and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C., or from the district offices of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce located in leading cities. The manual sells for 10 cents a copy; $4 a hundred, or $40 a thousand.

2 TO 1 BALLOT DEFEATS PLAN FOR BUSINESS

Biggest Vote In The History Of S. M. Turns Out

SAN MATEO, Nov. 18.—Rolling up 2383 votes against the proposition of opening the Baywood Park district to commerce, more than half of San Mateo's registered voters went to the polls Tuesday in one of the most spirited elections in the city's history. More ballots were cast than in any previous election.

Only 1154 "yes" votes were recorded, defeating the proposed invasion of the highly restricted residential district by a two to one vote.

The issue before the voters was the plea of the Baywood Park Company to have the city council authorized to rezone one block west of El Camino Real on Third avenue, one of the city's two business thoroughfares.

Full page newspaper advertisements, door-to-door campaigning, mass meetings and other forms of getting the public's vote for and against the proposition were resorted to in the rezoning battle. Opponents of the proposition charged that the Baywood Park Company broke faith in attempting to commercialize the district, after putting it on the market as a first class residential tract.

That company pointed out, however, that the block was zoned for apartments, hotels, etc., and that the high class stores planned would not be any more objectionable than these.

The heaviest opposition vote was cast in the San Mateo Park district, which went five to one against the rezoning.

Indemnity+Prevention=Insurance

More than Indemnity

Your fire insurance dollar provides far more than you realize. Of course it protects you from financial loss in case of fire. But it does so much more that it ranks as one of the most effective dollars you spend.

Merely as indemnity, Stock Fire Insurance is one of the cheapest necessities. Its average rate has consistently declined for more than 20 years, until in 1930 it reached the lowest figure in all American fire insurance history.

STOCK FIRE INSURANCE

teaches better building practices—furnishes a service for the suppression of arson, another for the improvement of community fire defenses and conducts many general fire prevention activities, all of which have contributed to the reduction of fire waste and the loss of life by fire.

EL CAMINO REAL WIDENING ABOVE ROGERS ST. DONE

Elimination of a "bottleneck" condition on El Camino Real between Rogers street and the Cordeiras creek bridge has been virtually completed, and the widened highway will be ready for Big Game traffic Saturday.

City Manager E. A. Rolison said he had been notified by the state highway department that the job would be finished by the end of the week.

In return for the right of way which the city secured through the co-operation of the Southern Pacific, the state accepted that portion needed for the highway widening, from Rogers street to the creek. This portion has been prepared for paving with an oil top, and will reduce traffic hazards by eliminating a dangerous curve in the vicinity of Claremont avenue.

The work cost the state about $5000, it is estimated.

The Southern Pacific will plant shrubs and ornamental trees along the new right of way.

NEVER BITE A COP

BALTIMORE, Md. — Mildred Hamilton was a guest of a colored jamboree which started out quietly enough but which ended in a riot and free-for-all. Police hurried to the party and Patrolman Edward Eben encountered Mildred, much to his agony.

In reaching for her, he got his thumb in the way of Mildred's teeth. Mildred bit heavily on the digit and only a few resounding whacks over her head with his club made her let go.

Fifteen states now sterilize the feeble-minded.

WATKINS IS FEARED LOST TO U. C. TEAM

By RAY LEAVITT

Rudy Rintala, erstwhile halfback, will start at full for Stanford in the "Big Game" with the University of California on Saturday.

"Pop" Warner, Stanford coach, named a starting team last night and picked Rintala over "Dusty" Allen, best passer on the Stanford squad, to open the game at the fullback position. Rintala's selection came as a surprise, since Allen's ability to toss passes has been one of the highlights of the Cardinal attack this season.

While it is generally conceded that Allen's presence in the lineup provides the Indians with a greater scoring threat, selection of Rintala allows for greater speed and deception. Besides being a fair passer himself, the 172-pound fullback is almost a sure ground gainer on the Warner reverses and spin plays. With Hardy and Caddell at the two halfback positions, Warner has three speedy backs for off-tackle plays, while at the same time the combination holds a passing threat.

Capt. Harry Hillman, at quarterback, is the power on line plunging. "Spud" Hardy, as expected, starts at left half in place of Phil Moffatt. The latter appears to have recovered from a leg injury and will be held in reserve. Warner hopes to get by without using Moffatt, but the flashy halfback will be ready to play part of the game, if needed. Hardy is a capable substitute for Moffatt, while Warner likewise will have Kenny Afterbaugh on hand to play the position.

Ray Hulen gets the call at left guard over "Windy" Bigelow, and Bill Doub will start the game at right end. Hulen has been coming along fast, playing a great game against U. S. C. and he has earned consideration over Bigelow. Doub plays the only other doubtful position in the line, getting the call over Al Norgard, Mike Reynolds and Clark. Experience is the biggest factor in Doub's favor. The rest of the line with Colvin at left end; Hand and Ehrhorn, tackles; Marks, center, and Corbus, right guard is as strong as Stanford can muster.

The Bears were dealt a severe blow yesterday, when George Watkins, halfback, and best punter on the squad, suffered a recurrence of a foot injury. Watkins fractured his foot in the Southern California game, and the member was well on the mend until being re-broken in yesterday's scrimmage. Word from the Bear camp is that Watkins is definitely out of the big classic. His loss places the burden of left halfback and punting duties squarely on the shoulders of little Hank Schaldach, and Lee Vallinos, both equally capable.

"Rusty" Gill, smashing right halfback, came out of the scrimmage in good shape, without feeling the effects of an injured shoulder, suffered in the Idaho game. Gus Castro, fullback, only other doubtful Bear player, is ready to play.

Practice and more of it has been prescribed for the Bears today and tomorrow, while the Stanford players resting in game time at the Castletown Country Club.

Cage, Water Polo Teams In Practice

Preliminary practice is being held for varsity basketball and water polo candidates at Sequoia Union High School this week under the direction of Coach Frank Griffin, cage mentor, and Coach Jim Eya of the tank squad.

While many veterans in both squads are still engaged in football practice, the new men are going through daily workouts to try out for places on the two teams. League seasons in both sports do not start until the first of the year.

Approximately 35 cagers are going through the new basketball formations which Coach Griffin plans to use this year. Coach Ray Dimick will be in charge of the 130-pound squad, which will report for practice within two weeks.

More than 400 freshmen are seeking berths on the water polo team this year, and Coach Eya expects to have a veteran lineup made up largely of juniors who saw action as sophomores in the National A. A. U. junior water polo tournament last spring.

The town of Kenova gets its name from three states—"Ken" from "Kentucky," "O" from "Ohio" and "Va" from "Virginia."

P. A. 130 LB. TEAM DEFEATS SEQUOIA, 13-7

By AL EY

By defeating the Sequoia high school lightweights 13-7 at Redwood City Wednesday, Coach Clark Cypher's Palo Alto high school 130-pound team took over possession of second place in the league standings. It was the concluding game of the 130-pound division of the P. A. L. season. San Jose won the championship a month ago after handing a 28-0 defeat to Sequoia.

Sequoia scored first and obtained an early lead on an unusual play when a Cherokee forward connected with one of Cuffe's forward passes in the first two minutes of play. The ball was knocked up into the air and it was a free ball when Branks of Sequoia recovered it. He ran over for the score from Palo Alto's 10-yard line. Lewis bucked the extra point on a line play.

On the kickoff the Vikings came back strong after the Norsemen were downed with the Cherokee 25-7. The Viking fullback tossed the ball from his 20-yard line. Arroutzet caught the pass at the 10-yard line from where Cuffe shot a short pass over the Indian line to Fred Woods who caught it in the end zone. For the extra point Cuffe tried the other end of the line and Captain Arroutzet was there to receive another short pass. The first quarter ended with the score tied at 7-7.

A 15-yard Cuffe to Captain Arroutzet pass started the fourth quarter and resulted in the Palo Alto win. The Viking fullback tossed the ball from his 20-yard line. Arroutzet caught the pass at the 10-yard line from where Cuffe shot a short pass over the Indian line to Fred Woods who caught it in the end zone. For the extra point Cuffe tried the other end of the line and Captain Arroutzet was there to receive another short pass. The first quarter ended with the score tied at 7-7.

Tanforan Race Season Extended

Racing days at Tanforan, San Mateo county's turf field, will continue beyond the 27 days planned until January 2, inclusive, the Pacific Coast Breeders Association announced this week. Thousands of requests from all parts of San Mateo county and the Peninsula that the big plant continue in operation until after the holidays, prompted the extension, the association said. The track employs 300 San Mateo countyans and keeping them employed was urged as a means of stimulating Christmas business.

Nearly all the stables now at the track for the present meeting have signified their intention of staying and there will be several big stake races added for week-ends and holidays. Judge Joseph A. Murphy and Captain Ralph C. MacArthur will continue as officials in charge, assuring the continued high standard of the track, the association said.

About three months after the close of the winter meeting the Tanforan association plans to stage a spring meeting with big stake races and feature events. The spring meeting will open March 31 and close April 30, operating for only 27 days. Then the horses will go East.

"Big Game Week" is being observed at the track this week with crowds here for the football battle Saturday taking in the special racing features. At Tanforan Saturday the association will stage the greatest stake race of the meeting, the San Francisco Handicap. The handicap will be for two-year-olds and upward over a mile and a sixteenth course for a purse of $10,000 added.

Some of the finest mounts in the nited States are at Tanforan for the classic this week-end. Among them is Plucky Play, rushed across the continent after winning the Pimlico, Maryland, feature last week-end. It is expected that many thousands will gather to witness this great race.

TRAPPER LEASES ACRES
NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Leasing of 700,000 acres of fur trapping land in Louisiana marshes to add to his present holdings, Morris Steenberg, of New Orleans, became the largest single holder of this type of land in the world. He now has holdings of more than one million acres.

PRISON AND JAIL - PART MAN, WIFE

Clearly attempting to shield his wife, Jack Berquist, 35, formerly of Minneapolis, was sentenced Thursday to San Quentin prison on a charge of second degree burglary for the robbery of the rich Van Hoosear household in Hillsborough last January 20.

And the wife, Alvira Berquist, 24, whose parents live in Phoenix, Ariz., was given a year's sentence in the county jail, since when she will be admitted to probation. She also was charged with second degree burglary.

Sentences were passed Thursday morning by Superior Judge Franklin Swart. Defense Counsel Jerome Macdonald pleaded for probation for the pair, but Judge Swart said the crime was one too serious to merit freedom.

Berquist told in detail how he bound the maid, and Mrs. Richard Van Hoosear, when she unexpectedly returned from town. As she walked into her household and met Berquist standing in the hallway of her boudoir, she asked: "Who are you?"

Berquist, trembling from fright, could find no words to answer. She repeated her question, and he then said: "This is a holdup, Mrs. Van Hoosear."

She was bound with tape and locked in a closet. Berquist and his wife then escaped with jewelry and clothing valued at $8,000, for which they obtained $410, he said.

BELMONT ADOPTS DOG RESTRICTIONS

BELMONT. — The city council Wednesday adopted an ordinance requiring persons to obtain a permit from the city if more than three dogs are kept. Licenses are revocable at any time. Applicants for permits must wait ten days, during which time neighbors or other residents may protest against the granting of any permit.

M. W. Fuller was added to the list of deputy police officers stationed at the dog racing track here. There are now 10 extra officers.

Residents of the Belle Mont area complained of the quality of their drinking water. S. M. St. John, health officer, suggested that the tanks be cleaned and painted. A sample of the water was taken for analysis.

Local Fans Pick U. C. Over Cards To Win Big Game

Who'll win the "Big Game"? California—according to a canvass of Redwood City football fans, but the Golden Bear rosters are keeping their hopes in check and will admit to but a narrow margin of victory over Stanford University.

Of 83 persons who expressed an opinion, five ventured a guess that the score would be tied. Two each picked scores of 0-0 and 13-13, and one saw a 6-6 tie. Forty-nine loyal Californians picked their team to win, while 29 Cardinal fans were sure "Pop" Warner's charges would come through.

While most scores hovered around the 13-12 and 19-13 mark, with California given a slight edge by the majority of fans, some big score guesses were ventured. The most ardent Californian picked a victory over Stanford by a 26-13 score, while two Stanford rosters saw victories by scores of 49-13, and 40-7.

Sportsmen Plan Duck Trips This Week-End

Following an enthusiastic opening day of the 1931 duck hunting season in Redwood City with more than a dozen limits reported, local sportsmen will bid their time until Saturday, when parties will head for duck clubs in the bay region in quest of cangasbacks and sprig which are hovering close to the nearby ponds.

In spite of the Big Game football attraction at Palo Alto, many devotees of outdoor sports will pick up their guns to take advantage of their best opportunity for duck hunting in years and to bag their quotas of ducks before the short season closes December 15.

Woodside

It was really a very creditable performance put on by the dramatic section of the Parent-Teacher's Association on Wednesday evening at the Woodside hall. Although only a few rehearsals had been possible, under the able direction of Mr. Spence of the Sequoia High School faculty, real dramatic talent was disclosed. Woodside will look forward to further performances by these fine actors. Those taking part were, Mr. and Mrs. James Wilkie, Mr. and Mrs. Leland John, Mrs. Stoh, Mrs. William Langley, Miss Anne Dozanic, Miss Mildred Fraiser and Miss Alda Silva.

Mrs. Irving Hall Mayfield of Long Beach is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Daniel C. Jackling. Mrs. Mayfield is the former Miss Jolie Borden of Los Angeles and is the wife of Commander Mayfield, United States Navy, who is on duty on this coast with headquarters at San Pedro.

For several years past, the Stanford football team has gone into seclusion for several days before the Big Game at the Family Farm here in Woodside. What part of the stimulating and tonic air of Woodside had upon their victories upon the field, we do not know, but this year the Family Farm is furnishing seclusion to the Stanford team and if by chance they shall win on Saturday, we shall claim some of the credit of our climate. The Stanford team is spending the hours of waiting at the Castledown Country Club near Pleasanton.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Harris have invited a large group of their many friends to an informal buffet luncheon on Saturday, before the game. They will not be the only residents of Woodside to entertain on that day. When the big game is held at the Stanford stadium, Woodside offers a convenient way-station and luncheons before and dinners after the game are the order of the day.

Miss Betty Ann Pope, of the KPO radio staff, whose home is in Woodside, entertained twenty-five of her radio friends at dinner in Pescadero on Saturday evening.

Mrs. A. B. Swinnerton entertained some of her friends at luncheon at her home here on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hotelling and family, spent the last week-end at Del Monte.

Sixty members and guests of the Woodside Fire Department gathered at the Woodside Inn on Thursday evening for the annual banquet of the department. Last year the dinner was marred by a call to a fire that took the members to the posts of duty and left the guests to finish the dinner alone. This year there was no interruption in the progress of the banquet. Leland John presided as toastmaster.

Mr. and Mrs. William Langley, whose home place was sold a few weeks ago, have moved to Palo Alto.

TYPICALLY IRISH

PORTLAND, Ore. — Bricks are jokingly termed the national weapons of the Irish. But when the H. V. Daugherty family had a little squabble recently, Mrs. Daugherty used another typical Irish token, the potato, as her weapon. Daugherty, in suing his wife on the grounds of desertion, informed the court that she had picked up a dish of potatoes and had thrown them at him. They weren't mashed either, he added.

Although most artificial silk fabric is made of wood pulp, it can also be made from cabbages, bananas or any other vegetable matter from which cellulose is obtained.

HETCH HETCHY VERY UNSTABLE POWER SUPPLY

Amount That Can Be Sold Depends Upon Rainfall

(From P. G. & E. Progress)

San Francisco's revenue from the sale of Hetch Hetchy power to the P. G. & E. in September was only $15,975.94. "This," reports the San Francisco Examiner, "was the smallest check the city has ever received since its Moccasin plant was placed in operation in 1925."

The October check was even smaller, amounting to only $842.94. Revenue to the city from Hetch Hetchy usually approximates $190,000 a month. Lack of water made it necessary to shut down the city's power plant on September 5, except for a small amount of stream flow power. Little return is expected from power for the next five or six months unless more than normal rain or snow falls in the mountains.

The plight of the city's plant caused the San Francisco Chronicle to remind the people that if the city was distributing its own power it would have to "build and keep constantly ready a steam trolley plant of capacity equal to that of the mountain power plant."

"This statement, though obvious enough," said the Chronicle, "has always been met with some disbelief. Now the facts are clear. "For September the Moccasin plant produced less than one-tenth of the power it put out in September last year, the year before and the year before that. When there is no water there is no power. "Suppose the city were distributing Hetch Hetchy power and had customers for the full normal output. What would it have said to its customers? Could the city have called them on the phone and said: "When you are in the retail power business you must be ready to serve your customers at all times, not just when it rains."

GAY ADVENTURERS BY MILDRED BARBOUR

CHAPTER 63 The Meeting

After Carlo's covert threat, Sheila knew that she could expect trouble—more trouble. He would tell Harry or the Count that she had been seen at the station with a man—presumably Dr. Baxter—and by the time he had finished with the story, he would have them believing that Mrs. Westley's arrival had foiled an elopement.

She felt that she ought to remain at the villa during the afternoon, in case either Harry or Bellefonte appeared, but she was eager to see Constance, and she knew that Dr. Mac would be waiting for her at the little pension. So, while Mrs. Westley and the Baronne were deep in tea-table gossip, she stole out of the house and joined him.

Although he had prepared her for her meeting with Constance, she was, nevertheless, shocked to see how worn and tired the girl looked. All the old sparkle was gone. The gay, imperious Constance was now wan and dispirited. She held out her hands to Sheila with a wry little smile, and Sheila's generous heart was wrung by the humble way in which she said:

"Will you ever forgive me for all the trouble my folly has made you?"

"It has been an adventure, and that's what I wanted," laughed Sheila.

"And that's what you had—still have," interposed Dr. Mac.

"But now we must talk ways and means," said Sheila practically. "That is, Constance, if you are able to think of such things." "I only know that I don't want to face the music any sooner than I have to—that will be when my father and mother come," said Constance wearily. "As soon as father arrives, I'll confess everything to him and he'll help me, no matter how furious he is. But, until then, I want to stay here, very quietly. I couldn't possibly face the ordeal of meeting people, particularly Jean, the odious thing."

Sheila heaved a long sigh. "I suppose I must go through with it then," she said. "Anyway, it is impossible for us to swap identities now. That would bring all sorts of trouble."

"I know," said Constance. "You look so blooming, and I'm so fogged that it would be simply impossible. I feel that I aged 10 years since I realized what has happened."

"Nevertheless, said Sheila, "your mother's friend, Mrs. Westley, saw you at the station this morning and almost spoke to you. She told me about it when she came to call a little while ago." She did not tell Constance of the capital that Carlo had made of Mrs. Westley's remark, but she did tell Dr. Mac, when he took her back to the villa.

"So please, Malcolm," she begged, "see to it, since you are Constance's physician while she's here, that she doesn't get about much, because we don't want our plans to miscarry at this date."

"But what do you think Carlo will tell the Count, or Harry?" he asked anxiously.

"The most damaging things he can think of," she answered. "The thing that seems most likely to make the greatest amount of trouble. Whatever it is, I'll know of it very soon. Neither Harry nor Jean is at all backward in telling me when I have done something of which he disapproves. By the way, it might help matters if you didn't appear at the villa tonight. I don't want to stir up the animals unnecessarily."

"I feel as if I were deserting you under fire," he said. "But perhaps you are right. Besides, I must find some one to take care of Constance, and I want to see her again tonight. She must have something to make her sleep. She tells me she's had insomnia for a week or more. If this keeps up, she'll go to pieces."

He said good night to Sheila under the eye of the Baronne, who appeared from the arbor at the sound of the motor car in the drive. "I thought Carlo might be with you," she said. "I can't imagine where he is. He left directly after tea and I haven't seen him since."

"I can guess where he is," murmured Sheila, as she ran up to dress for dinner. She was afraid that dinner might be a trying occasion, so she fortified herself by putting on her most becoming evening gown.

The Baronne gave her a keen glance when she entered the drawing room. "For whom have you made yourself so fine?" she asked pettishly. "We are quite alone tonight. Even Carlo has deserted us."

"But he is doing his best to provide us with diversion for later in the evening, I'm sure," said Sheila. "And I must be equal to the situation."

"I haven't the slightest idea as to the meaning of that remark," said the Baronne. "I have had enough diversion for one day, with Jean's dramatics!" echoed Sheila. "What do you mean?"

"Oh, he came, after you had left this afternoon, and when Carlo casually mentioned the fact that Mrs. Westley thought she had seen you at the station with a young man, he flew into a terrible rage. We both assured him that she admitted having been mistaken, but that seemed to make no difference. He said he suspected that you were planning to go away without a word to any one, and that the arrival of this Dr. Baxter was part of the scheme. Oh, he behaved like a jealous idiot. And then he left, saying that he would return after dinner."

She paused and listened as the hum of a motor car came nearer. "He may be coming now," she said, rising. "I'll have my coffee in the library. I don't want to see him." And she swept out of the dining room, leaving Sheila alone.

PASADENA — Temperatures up to 10,000 degrees Fahrenheit are expected in a solar furnace being devised here by scientists of the California Institute of Technology. The heat will be obtained directly from the radiation of the sun and will be concentrated in the furnace. The temperature will be nearly as hot as that on the surface of the sun, it is said.

UNGRATEFUL — Mrs. Lizzie Southerland has found, contrary to common belief, that kindness does not pay. A 14-year-old hobo recently came to her home and she gave him a home and something to eat. The same night the youth slipped up behind her and attempted to choke her. Her screams frightened him away.
